Notes:

Napoleon shows diligence and proves himself to be a great leader by the outstanding results of his domestic policies. He has done a great job setting important standards for France and its people. The only room for improvement is for self control and not abusing his power.

Foreign Policies:

Unlike the careful and persistent effort displayed in his domestic policies, Napoleon's foreign policies show rashness and lack of responsibility for his actions, thus leading to a poor economic situation in France and other lands under Napoleon's control. I would like to see Napoleon getting himself back together and thinking assiduously before declaring foreign policies.

Ability to gain trust of his people:

Napoleon is very popular among his people and gains respect and trust very quickly by founding basic standards for France. However, as he gets out of control with his foreign policies, less people feel devotion to Napoleon. I believe that by applying his strategies in creating domestic policies for France into foreign policies, Napoleon would gain greater success.
